

Security Analysis & Planning Services

Mitigating Risk Worldwide

Governments and enterprises across the world are struggling to confront terrorism as it threatens international stability and upsets economies.

Risk mitigation is a priority. Instead of arbitrarily throwing costly security measures against a perceived threat, organizations are turning to cost-effective security analysis, assessment and planning.

Finding the strengths and weaknesses of an organization's operational security program can help avoid a breakdown during a crisis or emergency. Securing critical infrastructure, protecting intellectual property and ensuring business continuity during times of crisis requires staying on top of internal security programs and, in some instances, federal security regulations.

The stakes are high if security is compromised. Insurance, energy, utility, financial, maritime, nuclear, chemical, biological, radiological and hospitality are some of the industries realizing the need for proactive preparation and planning.

Delivering Effective Business Solutions

Security analysis and planning focuses resources on developing a tailored plan to help reduce the risks confronting organizations from an "all hazards" perspective. This approach enables an organization to view and address potential problems from multiple angles.

Triple Canopy's analysis and planning specialists are highly trained and experienced. With former military backgrounds, many of our personnel are experts in counterterrorism, special operations, training, security operations, security strategy, weapons, explosives, detection, assessment, intelligence analysis, medical preparedness and high-risk crisis operations.

Our processes are centered on continuous assessment, training and effective operations that provide a layered approach toward protecting people and information as well as national and business assets. We deliver cost-effective business solutions that maximize security operations, mitigate risks and increase profit margins. Software tools are a key part of our assessment services, enabling our customers to develop comprehensive risk mitigation measures based on qualified processes. Our specialists can conduct specific software modeling services or train your personnel to utilize these nationally recognized tools.

Triple Canopy has performed security assessments and exercises for both public and private enterprises.

Sites covered include the U.S. Department of Energy facilities, nuclear facilities, private corporation sites as well as critical municipal infrastructure and utilities.

Services

Triple Canopy has an exceptional capability to conduct counterterrorism analysis from the potential adversary's point of view. Our broad range of services can be tailored to meet the security requirements of any organization. We work to identify adversarial tactical opportunities by implementing proactive measures that minimize corporate loss and assist our customers to prepare for a catastrophic event.

Security Audits and Evaluations

Triple Canopy specialists perform audits of an organization's security plans, operations procedures, training and physical security in order to ensure the viability of the security program. A complete audit report outlines our findings and recommendations.

Security and Vulnerability Analysis

This comprehensive analysis examines an organization's security posture. By inventorying assets that need to be protected and documenting the spectrum of viable threats, we can help you develop a security strategy from the ground up or update an existing strategy.

Physical and Operations Security Planning

By reviewing an organization's operational planning and procedures, Triple Canopy specialists offer guidance and recommendations for improving physical security. We follow up by providing security personnel with guidance on how to respond to threats and breaches.

Security Program Implementation Assistance

Our specialists are experts in assisting the client with implementing processes or updates of security policies and procedures. Assistance can include security assessments, performance testing and complete validation testing from tabletop analyses to a full-blown force-on-force exercise.

Performance Evaluation and Testing

We understand preparing for and running a formal exercise can be a daunting task. Using the latest industry information, Triple Canopy can help analyze threat factors against your security strategy to promote a cost-effective and sound defense. Our professionals are experienced at managing and executing multiple force-on-force exercises. As drills become more complex, controller knowledge and actions are vital to the success of the exercise. Triple Canopy specialists are available to train and advise controllers in your organization as required.

Adversary Threat and Mission Analysis

Our specialists can help you determine realistic threats against specific assets. We will develop a series of the most probable adversary courses of action ranking them according to the probability of success, given the security posture of the organization. We will then develop a list of recommendations to identify and mitigate these actions.

Red Team Operations

Triple Canopy can develop and implement demanding scenarios featuring Red Teams, specialists playing the role of an intruder or adversary, configured and equipped to represent any threat posed to your assets. We also work with your organization on a confidential basis to provide an external evaluation of a site, or security and emergency response procedures to counter an attack.

Red Team/Adversary Training

Poorly trained adversaries who do not understand the real intent of a force-on-force exercise can waste both time and money. For those looking for a turnkey, adversary training program, we provide customized training classes to meet your needs. Triple Canopy's training programs are designed to parallel the requirements of the NRC's NUREG "Composite Adversary Force Performance Standards for Force-On-Force Exercises."

Company Profile

Recognized for its performance as a premium service organization, Triple Canopy combines integrity and quality to deliver integrated security and protection solutions to organizations worldwide.

Organizations trust Triple Canopy to secure people, facilities and other high-value assets and provide a wide range of risk management services.
